CURRENT COMMENTS

A LOFTY SENTIMENT

The following are the noble words of a noble sentiment, as expressed by President Wilson in his closing words in his message to Congress regarding the vexed Mexican situation: "The steady pressure of moral force will, before many days, break the barriers of pride and prejudice down and we shall triumph as Mexico's friends, sooner than we could triumph as her enemy, and HOW MUCH MORE HANDSOME, WITH HOW MUCH HIGHER AND FINER SATISFACTION OF CONSCIENCE AND HONOR."

How different to the words and actions of his Democratic predecessor, President Cleveland, in his quarrel with Great Britain some few years back. The words of great men are often recalled long after the men have passed away, and the noble words and inspiring sentiment of President Wilson are, no doubt, destined to live long after the man who uttered them has passed away from the scene of action and time.

WHAT DO PEOPLE EAT?

Dr. Mahood, head of Calgary's health department, is out after the vendors of bad meat that is sold in Calgary, brought in, says Dr. Mahood, from the country; and he avers that people have no idea what they eat when they order meat at some of the restaurants in the city.

Says Dr. Mahood: "You have no idea to what extent this is carried on. To give you an idea, take the report of the sanitary inspector for a single month. Here is one—it is not the worst we have had, but is just an average report. It shows that in one month at just one packing house the inspector condemned one cow, 21 immature veals, 39 diseased beef livers, five beef heads, nine hogs, 27 hogs' heads, 54 hogs' livers and hearts, and 60 pounds of sausage meat. If that much stuff which came from the country was condemned at one packing plant, you can imagine how much bad meat is sold in the city to restaurants, etc., for it is but a small part of the meat from the country that goes to any packing house."

Dr. Mahood is impressing upon the city commissioners the necessity of putting through some law of inspecting all meats intended for consumption coming into the city, and as far as possible put a stop to sale of bad meat in the city.

"DIRTY WATER"—NOT CLEAR WATER.

According to the dispatches published in the daily papers, the provincial election case in Clear water seems to have stirred up a lot of political mud that has made that riding a regular mud-hole and a cess-pool of political rotteness. It may be taken for granted that it is pretty rotten muck when the Albertans take up the case and says editorially:

"And now the returning officer cannot be found. The election in this pocket borough seems to have been one irregularity after another. The riding should never have been created. Not too votes were polled, and it seems that most of them were irregular. The election campaign was vicious, and all parties seem to have been equally gross in their method of getting votes. The events after the election are surely not above suspicion. In fact, if one tenth of the reports that have been circulated are true, there has been nothing right from the beginning. The legislature should disfranchise the riding. Then it should make a careful and thorough investigation into the whole election, and punish with no uncertainty all who are mixed up in any irregularities. This would be a wholesome lesson to politicians throughout Alberta."

The Albertan also accuses both political parties of being pretty well equally guilty of gross irregularities. Whether that is so or not, it certainly was not a Conservative returning officer who has been so suddenly spirited away, in order that a writ—by the Judge's orders—could not be served upon him so that he could give evidence in the case.

A store in Calgary has been rifled by burglars three or four times within as many months. This is what one might call a repeating rifle.

A news item says that Harry Thaw's estate may be tied up. If Harry Thaw had had no estate to tie up, Harry himself would have been tied up long ago.

A recent invention is a lifter for taking down jars from top shelves. A mother writes that she has for years possessed an infallible one—who is at present down with the measles.

It has been suggested that the Calgary city police start a clean-shaving campaign. This would give the suffragettes of that city one weapon less on which to lay their hands.

If ever money was a curse it has been so in the case of the Thaw millions. They have been a source of corruption at every stage of the family's recent history.

"Hooray for Harry Thaw hooray for the British Flag!" the crowd at Sherbrooke is said to have shouted. This isn't the kind of company the old flag has been in the habit of travelling in up to the present.

It is rumored that Alberta proposes to tax all bachelors over the age of 30. The bachelors would welcome the idea if only the government would agree to sew on their buttons and darn their darned holey socks.

At last the masculine ankle is to come into its own. Some American cutters have invented slit trousers for men, which looks like a Mexican bandit's costume in comic opera, and some Americans are said to be actually wearing them. It is a pity someone doesn't come along with a split skull invention that shows how little brains some people have left in their craniums.

A Very Sudden Death

The very sudden death of Chester Hersey, the 12 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hersey, created quite a painful sensation in town last Friday morning, whilst attending the Stately school. Chester had left his home for school apparently as well as usual, and played with the children somewhat at the morning recess. Entering the school after recess he took his seat and prepared to commence his studies, when, without a moment's warning, the book in his hand dropped on his desk and he fell onto the floor. Principal McMeekin, on turning round to see what caused the noise, noticed Chester crouched up in heap and hurried to his assistance, and, lifting him up, carried him outside, sending for the doctor. But after two, or three quivering gasps, the little body stiffened out and laid perfectly still. On the arrival of the doctor a few minutes later he found that the little life had gone out to the world beyond, without a word or without a struggle. Heart failure is supposed to have been the cause of his sudden collapse. It is needless to say that the sudden death of Chester caused a sensation at the school. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, with service at the Methodist church. Although it was raining hard at the time the church was filled with friends and neighbors of the sorrowing parents. Both pastors of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches took part in the service. The children of the Methodist Sunday school—in which Chester was a scholar, furnished the music, and their sweet little voices as they sang, "When He cometh, To make up His jewels," &c., as the little white casket was being brought in the church to the front, bowed down many a strong man's head. The interment took place in the Stately cemetery. The so suddenly bereaved parents of their only child have the heart felt sympathy of the whole community in their sorrow.

Mr. Nicholas Bawlf, the pioneer grain dealer in Winnipeg, says that not only will the grain yield be large, but it will be of an exceptionally high grade. There are other things besides total production to consider and the harvesting of the crop under the present ideal conditions means much more than a large increase in the output over other years. High grade brings more money to the farmer and that is what counts.

What Home Rule in Ireland May Be Like

Perhaps a little like what Home Rule in Ireland might be like can be gathered from the following: "The first business of the trades union congress to-day was the unanimous adoption of a resolution denouncing in virulent terms the British government and the lord lieutenant of Ireland for prohibiting meetings and strangling free speech in Dublin, and also condemning the brutality of the police. James Saxton, mover of the resolution, declared that anything done by James Larkin, one of the arrested striker leaders in Dublin was "white" as compared with the hellish blackness of the Irish Unionist leader, Sir Edward Carson, and his associates."

NO. 13 REMER STREET

Not Always an Unlucky Number

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Harley & Rogers was the name of the firm. They were both young men, full of vigor, and neither of them knew what the word fear meant. Each was preparing to leave the office for the day, gathering up papers and putting them away, locking some in his desk, putting others in a safe place.

The telephone bell rang sharply, and because the blond typist had gone home for the day both Harley and his partner, Rogers, picked up their extension telephones, and each heard the same breathless, broken cry for help.

"Come quick to No. 13 Remer street—quick!"

The connection was broken abruptly, and the two young lawyers each leaped from his chair to consult the other, and they met in the outer office with pale faces and start.

"Did you hear it, Bob?" gasped Harley, reaching for his hat.

"The other fellow," answered Bob, "hasn't. I'll consult with the police."

"The sooner the better. It was a girl's voice, Bob, and you know—why, what are we gabbling about? You're policemen—don't you know me? I'm going to Remer street."

Harley grasped a revolver from his pocket, slammed the door, and rushed out from the office close on the heels of his partner.

Rogers hurried around the corner to the nearest police station, while Harley hastened at the curb.

"Where is Remer street?" he asked of a policeman.

"Go down to Tenth street, three blocks east from the avenue. It's only a little court," was the reply.

A half hour later Harley was wandering distractedly around the confines track. There was another fainter impression. Then a tube of white paint dropped, stepped upon and the best of the tube of green paint was left.

They led up to the third floor, where a tube of green paint was left on the tracks to follow a ladder that led to a trap in the roof. It was fastened to the ceiling.

Harley set his shoulder against it and strained. Again and again he tried all his strength, and what he got was a rotten wood gave way, and he buried the door and emerged not and broke upon the roof, where he picked up a little white handkerchief.

He was sitting half on the roof, and the adjoining house and saw that the trap was fastened from the roof. On the roof of the third house was a tube of black paint on top of the locked trap.

On the fourth house was a small tube of green paint, and the trap was locked. On the fifth roof there was nothing, but on the roof of the last house, where the pale woman had answered the door, he found by diligent searching a little gold finger ring set with a turquoise surrounded by raw diamonds.

He put it in his pocket with a triumphant smile. The trap was fastened from the roof of the last and the first.

There was an iron rod fallen from the roof of the last house, and Harley used it to pry under the edge of the trap and break the rotten wood.

He was able to get his hand under and unfasten the lock. To another instant he was down the ladder, and he rushed to the room of the house.

Far below in the basement he heard the sound of a heated argument, and before going down he paused before the door, and he saw a man and a woman and it related his efforts. A girl's frightened sob was his answer.

Harley slipped inside, rolled the dresser up against the door and faced the girl in the dim light of the darkness.

The room was a little cluttered with a dark, plain face framed in misty blue hair. Her red lips were parted in terror, and her hands were clasped together, and she shrank against the farther wall of the room.

"Who are you?" she gasped. "Are you really a friend?"

"Yes," he said practically. "You tell me the fact that the girl is really a friend."

"Yes! I had a moment, and I asked for the first man that came into my head. They took the record from my hand before I could finish my explanation, dreadful!" she sobbed.

"It's all right now," moaned Harley. "My partner is coming down now with a policeman. Tell me what happened, please."

"I am an artist. I was painting here in the court—the row of old time houses attracted me when a woman came out of the other house and asked me to come in and see some very old pictures that she had. She said she thought one of them was an old master. I went inside, taking my hat and coat, and she said she was a woman of some talent, and she was the last of the line."

"Who are you?" she asked. "Are you really a friend?"

"Yes! I had a moment, and I asked for the first man that came into my head. They took the record from my hand before I could finish my explanation, dreadful!" she sobbed.

IMITATION PEARLS.

They Are Made With Essence Of Oyster, a Fish Scale Product.

As the real pearl comes from the oyster, so the large extent of the manufacture of artificial pearls depends on the oyster.

Imitation pearls are made of a mixture of materials, and are of course, trade secrets, but it is interesting to know what they are made of.

SANCTUARY IN ENGLAND.

The Principle Still Survives to a Limited Degree.

Much water has flowed under the old bridge since the British criminal could drift the strong arm of the law by the day, and the principle of sanctuary is no longer a very common sight.

Local News

Oh! You duck, ducks, duckie! Harvest hands are being quickly snapped up on their arrival here.

It looks as though wheat was going to take its place as "king" again in Sunny Southern Alberta.

Isn't it queer how many of your friends are broke when you want to borrow a few dollars.

Land values are taking a big jump upward in this district, owing to this year's bumper crop.

Our usual budget of local news has not reached us in time for this week's issue.

Maquis wheat is getting a big boost here and several farmers state they are going to sow it next year.

Many farmers are now wishing that they had put in more wheat—seeing what a dandy crop we have around the Cayley district.

Principal McMeekin of Stavely took the services here in the Presbyterian church last Sunday for the pastor, the Rev. Mr. McInnis, who was preaching elsewhere.

Miss Mildred Lane, daughter of Mr. Geo. Lane, was brought into town on a stretcher from the Bar U ranch, suffering from an acute attack of appendicitis. She was taken to the general hospital at Calgary, where, it was feared, she would have to undergo an operation.—Stavely Standard.

While the temperature was very low around here on Monday night, the reports are to hand that the lowest temperature registered was seven degrees above freezing point. The coldest spell was between the hours of two and five o'clock. Maximum temperature for the 24 hours between six o'clock Monday morning until six o'clock Tuesday was 58 degrees.

The Wednesday morning daily papers contained the pictures of Harry Thaw and his "guardian angel"—a woman, of course. But Harry's best "guardian angel" has been the Thaw millions.

Artificial floorings are now being made out of sawdust concrete. The cement used consists of a solution of magnesium chloride to which pulverized magnesite is added. The sawdust is then used in any desired quantity. Floors manufactured in this way are more resilient than concrete, and are not good conductors of heat. They wear well, and do not burn, charring under the fire test.

As investigation has been carried on by the laboratory of the London Lancet into the extent and way in which various aluminium cooking vessels are effected by the usual articles of food and flavoring materials used in cooking. The only case in which a derogatory result worthy of consideration was obtained was in the use of baking soda, and this should, therefore, be avoided. However, a warning to this effect is frequently issued when aluminium cooking vessels are sold. It appears, therefore, that the use of pure aluminium cooking vessels need occasion no misgiving as to possible evil effects. As will be seen from a reference to C. Steen's advt (the Cayley Hardware Store) in another column, that he keeps in stock a full line of this noted aluminiumware. Call and see it.

Mink breeding in making considerable progress in Prince Edward Island. Two pairs were recently sold there at $200 a pair.

Do You Know Him?

A bashful swain living near here (we omit all names) took a violent liking to a fair young lady near this town and after a great deal of hesitation finally brought his courage up to the sticking point, and made an evening call at her house. He found her busily engaged pressing a garment with a tailor's goose. She, however, received him very courteously, and continued her work. Two or three of the lady's female friends came in a few minutes after the poor fellow had subsided into silence, for he found it absolutely impossible to maintain a conversation with her. The sudden entrance of the visitors, instead of relieving only added to his embarrassment, and he sat in silence until it became a matter of serious concern to the company how to put him at ease, for he was known to each of them as a man of great worth, bashfulness being his only weakness. The young lady finally got through with her work, and called out to her mother in the next room.

Her mother coming in, she asked if she would take this goose out.

The bashful visitor sprang to his feet in an instant, exclaiming: "I beg your pardon, madam, for intruding on you, but I'll go out myself."

And before she could explain her meaning, out he flew. We are sorry to say that the little misunderstanding may end in making an old bachelor and an old maid. No, it wasn't the dashing young postmaster.

A deal of some importance was put through at Stavely last week, whereby the farmers of that district become the owners of the Severston 95,000 bushel elevator—at present the largest line elevator between Winnipeg and Calgary. For some few weeks negotiations were opened with a view to its purchase, but there was a difference of $2000 between the two, and finally the deal was called off, and the farmers decided to build one for themselves. But getting together again last week, the purchasers and seller agreed to split the difference, the purchase price being $13,000 cash.

To clear rooms of flies carbolic acid may be used as follows: Heat a shovel or any similar article and drop thereon 20 drops of carbolic acid. The vapour kills the flies. A cheap and perfectly reliable fly poison, one which is not dangerous to human life, is bichromate of potash in solution. Dissolve one dram in two ounces of water and add a little sugar. Put some of this solution in shallow dishes and distribute them in the house. To quickly clear the room where there are many flies burn pyrethrum powder in the room. This stupefies the flies, and they may be swept up and burned.

Buffalo Express: "The time has passed," said the orator haughtily, "when any man can hide himself behind a woman's petticoats."

"You bet," commented the cynic in a back seat. "Those X-ray skirts have stopped that."

The important announcement has been made by Dr. Roche, minister of the interior, that he intended to submit an amendment to the homestead law at the next session of parliament, which will stipulate that the homesteader, in lieu of breaking 30 acres of land, may meet the government's requirement by raising 30 head of cattle. The idea, back of the amendment, is the encouraging of mixed farming, that diversified farming is the most profitable.
